

UNIVERSITY TEACHING EXPERIENCE: Teaching Assistant in History, University of Toronto (1990-1993); Lecturer in History, University of Louisville (1998-1999); Adjunct Professor in History, Indiana University Southeast (1999).

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE: While in law school, Dr. Hora served as the Managing Editor of the Journal of Law and Education, (2001-2002). Upon graduation she worked as an Associate with Bishop and Associates (now Bishop Friend P.S.C.) of Louisville (2002-2003); she is currently employed as a Senior Staff Attorney at the Kentucky Court of Appeals (2003 until the present time). In 2015-2018 Dr. Hora served as a Barrister member of the Louis D. Brandeis American Inn of Court.

PUBLICATIONS AND SCHOLARLY ACTIVITY: Dr. Hora has published articles in scholarly journals and law reviews. Among her publications are the “Abstract of Clare Midgley, Women Against Slavery: The British Campaigns 1780 - 1870,” Journal of Women’s History, 1996; “Age of Great Cities,” Journal of the United Reformed Church History Society, 2000; “The Courts and Academia: Tenure Discrimination Claims against Colleges and Universities,” Note, Journal of Law and Education, 2001; “A Standard of Service That All Families Deserve: The Transformation of Intercountry Adoption Between the United States and the Russian Federation,” Note, Brandeis Law Journal, 2002.

Dr. Hora’s presentations include “The Progress of the Intelligent, the Moral and Kindly: Robert Vaughan’s Celebration of Urban Culture in the Age of Great Cities,” at the North American Conference of British Studies, Washington, D.C., 1995, and “The Language of Appeal,” at the Kentucky Law Update, London, Kentucky, 2009.

INTERNATIONAL SERVICE: Dr. Hora was a member of two U.S. delegations of teachers, preachers and community activists, which traveled to South Asia in 2004 and 2009. The first visit to South Asia was part of an exchange program called “Islamic Life in the U.S.” between South Asian Muslims and Americans which was sponsored by the U.S. Department of State through a grant awarded to the University of Louisville. This program was developed and directed by Professor Riffat Hassan and was part of an initiative launched by the U.S. Department of State in the wake of the September 11, 2001, to promote peace and understanding between Muslims of Pakistan, India and Bangladesh and Americans. The main purpose of this visit was for the American delegation to meet, and have personal interaction with, their Muslim counterparts in the three South Asian countries which have the largest concentration of Muslims in the world. Dr. Hora participated in many educational and cultural events during his visit. She also had the opportunity to meet General Pervez Musharraf, President of Pakistan, and Professor Iajuddin Ahmed, President of Bangladesh, and many other political, religious and educational leaders.

During her visit to Pakistan, Dr. Hora visited a school established for indigent girls in a remote rural village in Chakwal. This school was set up by a non-profit organization focusing on women with the help of a village elder. He was able to overcome the resistance of parents to educating girls by providing the girls with a small stipend for part-time training in the production of traditional papier-mache handicrafts. In addition to reading, writing, mathematics and health, the girls learned about human rights, as exemplified by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights which was displayed on the schoolroom wall, and especially women's rights. Dr. Hora was deeply impressed and inspired by the school and its students' commitment to uphold the dignity of every person, regardless of their background or station in life. The students presented the delegation with some beautiful examples of their handicrafts, including a box decorated with the American flag, a symbol of their commitment to a positive relationship with the United States. Upon returning home, Dr. Hora raised funds for the school among her colleagues and the judges at the Kentucky Court of Appeals. She has also spoken frequently about the school at public events.

Dr. Hora was also a member of a second delegation which traveled to Bangladesh in 2009. This exchange visit was part of "Religion and Society: A Dialogue" which was a follow up to "Islamic Life in the U.S." She participated in a number of interfaith programs in Dhaka and Chittagong, and had consultative meetings with multi-faith religious leaders in Chittagong to discuss the feasibility of this city being the venue of a future program of educational exchange.

COMMUNITY SERVICE: Dr. Hora participated in the consultations which led to the emergence of The Salaam Network (TSN) in the summer of 2016. TSN is a Louisville-based group comprising educators, writers, artists, and peace-and-justice activists committed to countering Islamophobia and other manifestations of bigotry, hatred and mistrust in the city of Muhammad Ali, America's best-known Muslim and a universal peacemaker. She has moderated three important TSN programs in 2016, 2017, and 2018. These programs were (i) a Presentation on "Exploring Islam: Past and Present: Christian-Muslim Relations, Contributions of Islam to Western Civilization," at St. Matthews Episcopal Church (October 2016), (ii) an Interfaith Workshop on "Challenges for Women: Enduring Wisdom from the Native American, Jewish, Christian and Islamic Traditions," at St. Agnes Church (October 2017), (iii) an Interfaith Workshop on International Women's Day on "Journey Toward Wholeness: Women in Four Spiritual Traditions - Native American, Jewish, Christian, Islamic," at Louisville Free Public Library (March 2018). Dr. Hora was also a presenter in a Panel-Presentation Program on "Christian Peacemakers' Interaction with South Asian Muslims in the Post 9/11 Era" (Part One), at St. Andrew United Church of Christ (August 2017). In her presentation she shared some memorable moments of her peacemaking visits to South Asia in 2004 and 2009.
